The Canadian Press Stylebook – A Canadian bestseller

The Canadian Press Stylebook is the bible consulted by journalists at Canada's national news agency as they deliver hundreds of stories each day to newspapers, broadcasters and Internet sites. The Stylebook is a one-stop reference guide for writing cleanly, accurately and concisely. It includes: updated content on writing for and about the Internet; headline writing; current listings and spellings on countries and cities around the world; changes to Canada's laws on polls, elections and youth justice; and dealing with freedom-of-information laws. The Canadian Press Caps and Spelling – For tricky and troublesome words

Now in its 19th edition, The Canadian Press Caps and Spelling is a handy reference that lists alphabetically the words, proper names and abbreviations most likely to cause problems for writers. Included is everything from the correct names of Canadian corporations and newsmakers to Internet terms and pop culture references. How do you spell the plural of perogy? Is it blue-line or blue line, Web master or webmaster? The answer is here. Order at thecanadianpress.com/books or use order form on back.

Guide de Rédaction – Award-winning guide for French-language writers

Winner of a prestigious award from the Office québécois de la langue française, this fifth edition – the first in almost 15 years – features: easy-to-follow rules for finding the right expressions and handling typographic and linguistic difficulties; a glossary of terms and concepts in finance, law, sports and labour relations; lists of troublesome words and common mistakes to avoid; and new sections on writing about terrorism and the Canadian military, as well as writing for and about the Internet.

NEW Online Stylebook and Caps and Spelling – Now available!

The much-anticipated online version of The Canadian Press Stylebook and Caps and Spelling book is now available. Subscribers to the online service will benefit from the:

- Convenience of using their writing resource from anywhere they have Internet access.
- Power of search tools that quickly scan both books and display relevant style listings.
- Flexibility of adding their personal notes, examples, custom style entries and commonly misspelled words to complement the existing books.
- Speed of real-time updates and email notifications of all style changes or additional content made by the editor of the books.
